

Instead of stepping into the family business once he was done with his studies Korvi Rakshand decided to make his own effort to change the world.

Korvi was determined to improve the lives of the impoverished people in the long term. One thing was key: sustainable development, an idea that would change Bangladesh as a nation permanently.

With the help and support of a few friends, JAAGO Foundation became a well-known youth-based organization in Bangladesh. Its focus is battling illiteracy and malnutrition in children and on rehabilitating them to better environments and social conditions. JAAGO activities revolve around providing long-term and sustainable benefits to children who are living below the poverty line..

The long-term goal of JAAGO Foundation is to have a school in every district of Bangladesh with supporting projects to help the entire community. JAAGO wishes to see every child in Bangladesh receive quality education and the platform to a secure, prosperous future.
